One of our specialties at Outside the Box is the design and development of media projects for our partners. These projects range from promotional videos for an event or program, to thematic videos that enhance/support specific teaching, to full-scale video curriculum series.

While our OtB staff doesn't operate the actual cameras or editing gear, we provide expertise in the areas of creative design, project development, budgeting, timeline, and overall management of the entire video project. Throughout the last 10 years, Outside the Box has developed friendships with several terrific video production companies. These relationships have allowed us to recommend the best quality production to our partners with complete certainty that the video team understands the heart and soul of each project and the ultimate goal of bringing students closer to Jesus.

At the outset of any video production project, we help determine the audience of the video, the scope of the project, and the ideal outcome of the final product. Working with the selected video production company we begin hiring talent, scheduling video shoots, setting up client review dates, and creating a budget for the project. The smallest projects can be managed and completed in a few emails and a 30-minute video shoot, but every few years we have a project that requires a couple of years to reach completion.

In September of 2008, Dare 2 Share released GOSPEL Journey Maui, the second edition of the GOSPEL Journey reality series curriculum. We began work on the GOSPEL Journey Maui product in January 2007, traveled to Hawaii for filming in January of 2008, and finally completed the editing and replication process in late September 2008. Our lead time included the casting call and selection of six students between the ages of 18 and 22. Each student came from a distinctly different worldview and spiritual belief system (Mormon, Jewish, Muslim, Christian, Buddhist, New-Age). We structured the filming each day around an activity and a life question – one day involved the cast sailing a private boat to Molokini to snorkel and discussing “what is the meaning of life?” The conversations, footage, and final product are amazing! This project was absolutely the result of God's intervention and creation, and we are so honored to have participated in what He is doing through this series.

Check out www.dare2share.org/gospeljourneymaui to see more and meet the whole cast.

On an annual basis we also get to participate in the creation process of every video piece used in the Dare 2 Share conferences and all of their promotional videos for events and programs. Each Dare 2 Share tour is promoted with a DVD that includes promotional videos, introduces the upcoming artists and speakers, and advertises current curriculum. Every event features between 40-50 media elements, each with a specific purpose and point, and each due before the first city of the tour. As a result, both our OtB team and our video production team are often juggling multiple video projects, curriculums, promos and deadlines – all while still working on the production of the actual event. We are very grateful for our partnership with Dare 2 Share and the continued creativity and leadership that D2S brings to the youth ministry market.

We continue to be humbled by and thankful for your continued prayers, encouragement, and support of the ministry of Outside the Box. You have helped to make these video projects and all of our events and media projects possible. Your financial gifts and ministry partnership mean the world to us.

Serving with you—
